"You can wear this under your clothes and basically no one would know you're looking for a dirty bomb or high levels of radiation," according to the company.

Alvion Science and Technology was the primary private contractor involved in the project. It was funded through the Defense Threat Reduction Agency.